Working Hours and Job Sharing in the EU and USA
Are Europeans Lazy? Or Americans Crazy?
Edited by Tito Boeri, Michael Burda, and Francis Kramarz

In the last 50 years the gap in labour productivity between Europe and the US has narrowed considerably with estimates in 2005 suggesting a EU-US labour productivity gap of about 5 per cent. Yet, average per capita income in the EU is still about 30% lower than in the US. This persistent gap in income per capita can be almost entirely explained by Europeans working less than Americans. Why do Europeans work so little compared to Americans? Can they be induced to work more without reducing labour productivity? If so, how? This volume explores these questions and many more in order to understand the changing nature of the hours worked in the USA and EU, as well as the effects of policies that impose working hour restrictions.

Education and Training in Europe
Edited by Giorgio Brunello, Pietro Garibaldi, and Etienne Wasmer
Europe is one of the richest and most educated areas of the world, yet it faces low economic growth, structural difficulties in the labour market, and stiff international competition. This book looks at the current state of play in education and training in Europe and asks what policies are necessary to ensure Europe can meet future labour demands.

Structural Reforms Without Prejudices
Edited by Tito Boeri, Micael Castanheira, Riccardo Faini, and Vincenzo Galasso
What makes economic reforms a success or a failure? Why do we witness ambivalent attitudes to reforms? Can governments implement reforms differently, without inflicting prejudice to large fringes of the population? This book explores these issues by comparing a number of reforms across a large set of countries and sectors. It aims to help readers understand the process of reform and the origins of success, and to help reformers discover new ways to implement reforms to benefit the most people.

Women at Work
An Economic Perspective
Edited by Tito Boeri, Daniela Del Boca, and Christopher Pissarides
Covering employment and wage gender gaps, participation of women, fertility, and the welfare of children, this insightful volume considers the trend towards greater participation of women in labour markets. It addresses the trade-offs involved in increasing participation of women in paid employment, setting out a better informed policy debate about these issues, and paving the way to realistic targets and ways to achieve them.

Structural Change, Welfare Systems, and Labour Reallocation
Lessons from the Transition of Formerly Planned Economies
Tito Boeri

“As transition took place in Eastern Europe, the first order of business was to understand the interactions between the decline of the state sector, the growth of the private sector, and unemployment. The second was to think about the role of existing institutions, in particular labour market institutions, in shaping these evolutions. The third was to think about the best way to redesign the institutions.

This remarkable book presents what we have learned at each step. It should be required reading for all those involved in understanding, guiding, and shaping transition.”
